Chapter 1 by Shae

It was the year of 1907 before you were born. My friends and I got into some big trouble. It all started at the Old Saint Mary hospital. We were all in high school and we were in social studies when Mr. Tash told us that there was a nurse and old man who lived there and haunt the place to this day. We all looked at each other in a kind of a sneaky way. So we started to ask more about this hospital.

Mr. Tash said it was here in Manhattan, A few miles away from the park in town east. So after school Jack, Katie, Steve, and I went to the old abandoned hospital. We checked out all the places in the hospital and around the hospital. We got done looking and left. Late at night we all sneaked out and met up at the park. Once we were all there we started to ride our bikes to the hospital. Earlier when we were there we found a little entry way, possibly for little insane kids. We went through and we ended up in a room. There was some blood stains on the wall, a tray with sharp tools, and two beds. Jack grabbed all of the tools and put them in his bag. We decided to go to the basement first so we started to leave.

We finally got in the basement and we set up all of our cameras and tape recorders. I had one and Steve had one. Katie asked out loud, "Is anyone there? if so give us a sign?" We sat there walking around the room and waited about a minute and then stopped them. We went back upstairs and went to this so called cafeteria, which looked like a jail house. We played the tapes and listened to them. Jack was listening to his, Katie was listening to camera number two, Steve was listening to camera number three. And I was listening to my camera. Katie said she didn't pick anything up. Neither did Jack or I. Steve was the only one who got something. We all listened to it and in a crackly nasty voice it said, "GET OUT!!" we all looked at each other frantically. Usually Jack isn't afraid of anything, but he was just as much as it scared us. But we didn't think about it at the time.

We decided to go to the room that the old man had died in. We set up just like we did in the basement. And we listened to the cameras. This time no one had anything except for Katie. Her camera had a different voice, it sounded like a woman. It had said, "Leave while you still can." So then we started to think about the recorders and didn't want any trouble, so we left.

We made a pact to never tell anyone or go back. A day later we hadn't seen Jack and realized he went back. So Katie called all of us and we went back to find him and we yelled for Jack. All of a sudden we all heard a whisper that sounded like Jack that said, "I belong here now." We all got scared and left crying, because we knew we would never see him again.
